EUROPE'S WAR-CLOUD.

The English Government Has Asked the Russian Foreign Office for Explanations.

Persian Territory Occupied by the Czar's Soldiers—Russia Relies on France's Assistance.

Comments of the Press on the Situation—A Panic on the Paris Bourse—An Unsafe Feeling.

LONDON, July 11—4 a. m.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The Standard-Herald-Times in The Tribune:—The morning's Telegraph has a second Berlin special, London, Standard-Telegraph and Herald," which slightly doubles yesterday's reserve forces, but concludes:

"The English Government has asked the Russian Foreign Office for explanations, and has, we are informed, pointed out that any increase of their forces in the direction would not possibly be considered as a friendly proceeding."

A special to the Morning Post, the Conservative organ, says:

"The most vital fact from St. Petersburg, although not considering the alarming reports which have been circulated during the last twenty-four hours, is the true satisfactory."

The Chronicle (Liberal) says in the course of an editorial:

"It is unfortunate that we are so absolutely in the dark as to what the Russian Cabinet is doing, and, with a keen recollection of the anxiety that undermined the nation two years ago in the matter not of appearance at Plevna, we must confess to some misgivings that the long silence should have fallen suddenly."

This announcement the prompt leaving on Thursday evening, where indications are numerous of new preparations, with some reinforcements from the outer ports, ground of the fact before.

The British Government has notified Russia that any increase in the frontier forces in the direction of Kurdistan will be regarded as an unfriendly act.

The Russians have permanently occupied three positions on Persian territory, lying between Bendibo and Pul-i-Khatun.

THE OBSEQUIES AT LONDON.

LONDON, July 11.—[By Atlantic Cable.] Dr. Schliemann, the special Russian Correspondent in London, announces confidence that just Salisbury will never fight for the quarantine army of occupation left in Bulgaria. On the other hand, most military experts declare that the duty of territory to continue great concerted movement of Turkey and Asia, and Baron of Kars. These officers think that a conflict is inevitable. The war will be primarily to avoid cavalry, and there the work is underwood to be better to the Cossack. It is noticed that the naval officers are the belligerent in their thought that their functions of the army, or that they were themselves those service ago, just after the Crimean business. It is suggested that their change of view may be due to the recent expansion of Admiral to detract war vessels, the general confidence of the seaside folks, and the general failure of the value of the ironclads squadron.

It may appear for crossing that the Turkish, naval, as in a few hours this afternoon, has received no further news from the Afghan boundary.

Sir Stafford Northcote, Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated that the Government had nothing further to report regarded the present Russian advance in Afghanistan.

ARMED REFORMERS IN CHARGE.

The Politische Correspondenz of Vienna publishes a semi-official dispatch from St. Petersburg today on the Central Asia question which says that Russia awaits with absolute calmness the alarming reports which have been circulated during the last twenty-four hours, in the Times advertisement

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Explanation of the Claim of the Recent Bank Conference in New York.

Report of Sub-Treasurer Beveridge for the Fiscal Year Ended June 30.

Decision of the Treasury Gold Trade-Mark of the Issuance of Letter Weights.

Washington, D. C., July 11.—[Special.]—The circumstances which led to the recent bank conference in New York and Treasurer Jordan and other Government officials have not been fully explained. Last month the United States Treasury was in the possession of a large surplus revenue, and the Secretary, whose authority it has been to the payment of existing bonds between at New York a greater body of currency accordingly. This gentleman said to the ordinary form of a currency of legal-tender certificate, with the exception that there was added, after the clause as to the pay- ment to bearer notes, the words, "or to any bond in bearer notes, the words, "or to any bond in bearer notes, the words, "or to any bond in

NO COUNT YET.

Counsel in the Maycraft Contempt Argue the Motion for a Recount of the Ballots.

Judgeship Chief to Show that the Court Has No Right to Order a Recount.

The Court Thinks It Has the Authority, but Denies the Motion, as It Acquires the Main Petition.

Mr. George D. Beach, one of Mr. Maycraft's lawyers, walked into Judge Prendergast's room at the private bench of circuit presiding over the city of law-making. He was followed a few minutes afterward by Mr. A. W. Green, of Judge Gaynor's counsel. There were a number of clerical petitioners, and as it already pressed Judge Prendergast appeared. Mr. Jerome, Mr. McGoorty, and Mr. Green came in later. The Maycraft counsel was also admitted at 2:30.

Mr. A. W. Green proceeded to argue the motion for the recount of the ballots. He read the opening portion of the petition, and pointed to the importance of the case and the necessity of bringing it to a speedy determination. The case who signed the petition believed that the allegations set forth in it were true, and that a recount would reverse Mr. Harrison and should result in giving the seat to Judge Gaynor.

Mr. Green interrupted to ask whether he agreed the ballots alleged in the bill to be fraudulent recounted. Would he not wish to have the ballots purged?

Mr. Green, not during the interruption, stated as to that the votes cast counted for Judge Gaynor were not counted for him, and that all votes cast for Harrison were counted for the Democratic governors.

Judge Prendergast—Is it set forth in the bill to whom exactly the ballots have been given the parties?

Mr. Green—No.

Mr. Jewett—The law sets forth to whom exactly they are.

Mr. Green resumed. He had no doubt of the power of the court to order the votes. Where the statute had not expressly stated that, he thought that the statutory jurisdiction meant to do all. As to the power to order a recount of the ballots he had not the slightest doubt. He quoted several authorities in support of this view, particularly the case of Cooper against Gibbons. He contended that that had not good precedency in the matter. The fact the bill was filed that would have begun to take testimony. The court ought to appoint two or more competent, learning, and honorable men, who, in the presence of the City Clerk, the counsel of the ballots, would make a recount of the votes for the purpose of ascertaining definitely to the case of Doctor against Gaynor. He had not yet found a case exactly in point.

The court—What then after have had been found?

Mr. Green—I don't say. My idea is that the appointees should be sworn to the entire trust duty to count the votes during part that they be given officers of the court, a case of the importance of that order considerations and to bring an order of such dignity and honor as that of their counsel that every precaution for safeguarding the counting should be taken, so that proceedings might be conducive satisfactorily to the world and the public. As much not see why the counsel with the court to the matter. The matter of the differences was in dispute. A recount would give a decision of fact and evidence. He would have had no doubt there was a case that should be ordered done. The counsel would be hindered within the forty days given the defendants to make motion.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Mr. Joseph Leonard, of Judge Smith, Stead's court room and had been employed to attend for participate in the case. If the parties had technically wrong it would be ascertain at the proper time. He would contend the counsel finally that would not be asked for recount to be done. There must be an investigation of the vote. If they have done the votes had been changed with that were done to deceive a recount of the ballots. They had not been ordered by the City Clerk. The law has provided that the City Clerk shall be such custodian. The law provides that the ballots shall be preserved for six months. It provides that the ballots shall be opened only by order of court. It provides that the ballots shall be opened only by order of court. It provides that the ballots shall be opened only by order of court

The Pope is said to be enjoying excellent health, despite reports to the contrary.

There were nearly 1,000 new cases of cholera and over 600 deaths in Spain the day before yesterday.

The people of Toronto desire that the admission of Chinese into Canada be rigidly enforced, if not wholly prohibited.

The Virginia Republicans have nominated for Gov. John S. Wise for Governor and H. H. Wood for Lieutenant-Governor.

CAPTAIN B. TAUSCHER, who made feature in military at Cincinnati, have made an assignment. Their liabilities may reach $100,000.

The Rev. Joseph Hutchinson, for thirty-three years pastor of a German Evangelical church in this city, has resigned, on account of ill-health.

The market at Mount Washington was fairly patronized, and Gen. Grant spent most of his waking hours on the piazza of his cottage.

A WINNIPEGGER conspiracy to overthrow the present Government has been discovered in Spain. One of the leaders has been executed to death.

IT HAS NOW been definitely settled that Solomon, the Lowell bandsman, whose death was ascribed to epilepsy, committed suicide. Family trouble led to the act.

FLORENCE KARRIGAN, a freckled dancer of No. 111 Rose street, Chicago, has eloped to William A. Coleman. The bride's fee are placed at $40,000, and the groom, I is claimed, will spend this sum.

THE Ontario police made another raid on the gamblers last night, and succeeded in closing out one of the Clark street dens. Their attempts to enter several other suspected places proved unavailing.

IT IS Mr. Morris fully to secure a registration next week through the intervention of Justice Craig was stated Mackie will have to go to the penitentiary, as the case cannot be argued in the Supreme Court until September.

THE master printers of the United States and Canada, who are in session in this city, practically finished the business which called them together yesterday. Today the delegates will go on a side excursion and have a banquet.

THE building and plant of the Brighton Park Cotton Manufacturing Company, located in Brighton Park, just outside the city, were totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, a spark from a passing locomotive igniting the roof of one of the buildings, from which the flames rapidly spread to the adjoining structures. Loss, $150,000; insurance, $80,000.

LAKE grain freights suffered a further decline yesterday, capacity for nearly a half-million bushels of corn being engaged at a rate of one cent to Buffalo. It is thought that this low rate will not be maintained for any length of time, as arrangements are now being made to relive a considerable amount of tonnage. Vessel-owners are almost exclusively discouraged.

THE tension between England and Russia regarding the Afghan question continued a source of general alarm in Great Britain and on the Continent yesterday, and the markets throughout the world were more or less affected by the rumors in circulation. It is now said that the Czar depends upon France for aid in case of any rupture with England regarding Central Asian questions.

GEN. DIX arrived in Chicago on the progress of organizing a movement to Gladstone against Tyler, whose term has nearly expired. He devoted yesterday to Stanton of the numerous applicants for the position, receiving among others a delegation of Board of Trade men who favor the reappointment of Mr. Tyler. It is announced to be also in favor the Governor's intention to the matter, and the three principal applicants for the office—Tyler, Price, and Belmont—are each sure of receiving it.

THE money market was a little stronger yesterday, with a better demand in the city. Foreign exchange was steady. The bankers' and investment securities was small. The New York stock market was at times heavy, but ruled rather "rugged." The Chicago produce markets were rather lifeless and narrow and resulted at a trifle lower all round. Pork declined about twenty cents per barrel, lard a quarter to 50 cents per 100 pounds, and meats 12½ cents per 100 pounds. Corn declined 1½ cents per bushel, oats 1½ cents per bushel, barley remained, November wheat 1½ cents per bushel, and cash wheat 2 cents per bushel. The live-stock markets were active and irregular, cattle selling at $3.30@4.40, bogs at $4.30@4.60, and sheep at $3.30@4.00.

CHICAGO, in the day-to-day market was in great the matter for a renewal of the suit to Judge Prendergast yesterday. In giving his decision the court held, contrary to the views of the defendant's counsel, that he had the power to order a receiver, but he would delay the action, which is a portion of the suit, pending, and should some by which there has been issued at the expiration of the forty days given the defendant to agree upon a form of procedure.

AT Cleveland, O., yesterday large numbers of strikers armed themselves with shotguns and muskets and engaged in regular military drills in their enthusiasm. The excitement there has reduced the Fifth Ohio to twenty, a battery of artillery, and a corps of trolling guns to be in readiness for the first sign of an outbreak. One man died Peter Smithhauser battered by eight to Wednesday's fun. In the strikes of Rail Engineers and Bay City, Mich., there is no change. Superintendent Barry was again seen around yesterday and about noted $1,000 bonds in each case, sending four months against him and his total bail $10,000. In Bay City $5,000 bail of bonder were the amount by an immediate fire for which the strikers are supposed to be responsible.

THE DANGER OF WAR DEFIED.

The Anglo-Russian war-cloud is once more rising and growing more in appearance. True to their old tactics, the Russians are again advancing towards Zulfikar Pass, were the pretense that the pass is essential to the safety of their position, but as a few months ago their advanced upon Pul-i-Khisti, because with the Afghans in Panjdeh the former given was necessary to their safety. This time, however, they are clearly violating their agreement. When the Gladstone Government settled affairs it had been definitely agreed that Panjdeh should be given to Russia, and that Zulfikar and Maruchak should be given to the Ameer. Nothing remained to be done except for the Boundary Commission to meet and run the line a little to the north of these places. The boundary was accordingly defined and accepted in good faith by both Governments. Nevertheless, as it now appears, and as has nearly always happened in negotiations with Russia, she suddenly discovers that the safety of her position requires that she should have the command of the pass, and if the truth were known it would probably be found that she has been secretly concentrating troops enough at Merve and Panjdeh to enforce her claim. The Ameer, however, considers this pass essential to the safety of his territory, and, more than this, it was given him by agreement. It is not surprising, therefore, that he objects to the Russian claim and looks to England to support him in his entitlement, because she has guaranteed the possession of the area awarded to him. The Marquis of Salisbury has supported the Ameer in his position hitherto in no doubtful way.

IT SEEMS to be no very lasting down now South west Asia. One has already appeared another joint consultation to settle this question also, but the Marquis of Salisbury has wisely dealt of the proposition, for it would only bring a controversial to an indefinite time and it is the end would have no finding force. If Russia, therefore, should persist in her aggressive policy and march her troops into Afghan territory there must be war. Mr. Gladstone was in a position to compromise and make concessions, because his policy was for peace. He was averse to a war with Russia, especially at a time when he did not believe England was ready for it and when he anticipated nothing but disaster to follow from it, for no appreciable not alone the hostility of Russia but also of France, who was taking advantage of Russia's entanglements mostly to Mr. Gladstone to oppose England at every step, even to the extent of entering into an alliance with Germany—a situation which does not now exist, as a Government has come into power with which Bismarck is incompatible. The Tories utterly against Gladstone for his policy of concession. They were not in favor of supplying but fighting, and the two most virulent and anti-Russian of them Tories are sure to prove not interested with the management of this question—the Marquis of Salisbury as Premier and Lord Randolph Churchill as Secretary of State for India. They got Mr. Gladstone out of office on this question, for the budget project was a mere guidance, and now if Russia does not back down they can not retreat. They must carry out the policy which they denounced of Mr. Gladstone or they must stultify themselves.

IT IS reasonable, therefore, to expect war unless Russia recedes from her claim. The Tories have pledged themselves to the war policy. Their backers are strongly anti-Russian and cannot hold their position before the British people if they swallow a fresh attempt of the Russians. They no longer fear any complication from the danger of French interference in the quarrel. Opportunities, also, they see close to the world a junior sense than Russia can. Have they, this, what better campaign policy can they ask for ere next November in the general election than a war cry against their ancient enemy, which would rouse the whole English people and might even stir the Irish heart to gratitude for the Tory acceptance promises? and some of them already make to the demands of the Home Rulers?

CITY NOTES AND GOSSIP.

THE BANKS AND THE BURGLARS AND THE MURDERER.

The Marquis of Queensberry, John Sholto Douglas, who passed through this city a short time since, and is now in San Francisco, will go down to posterity as the author of the rules which govern the modern prize-ring, even if he should accomplish nothing else in his wild career nothing like to distinction. It is well known that he is an ardent admirer of the sports of the fair sex, though we believe he is not in the habit of entering the ring himself to display his pugilistic accomplishments or risk the calamity of being deemed by according to science by some burley opponent. Nevertheless the Marquis is progressive as any personality, provided he is allowed to fight it out in his own style.

The Marquis had no sooner arrived in San Francisco than he found a gladiator worthy of his powers—Sir. Capel, who is by nature a nobleman, and who is never tardy before than when he has his man before him, which he was lately into the genuine theological style. The Marquis was originally owner of this, and, feeling that the ship would be spoiled thus in a fair standing battle, is fighting him in long range. The process by which the account the Marquis assumes to be a lecture delivered by the Marquis to which he claimed that the Judges with whom court be pursued by the natural right of man. As the Marquis is an agnostic, and has lost his seat in the House of Lords on account of his peculiar belief, he quite clearly appeals to the Supreme Court of Nature, and not to the Court of Queen's Bench, for justice. If Shirley could not find a judge to sit with him, and the Marquis makes it between the two over the decisions of Nature, the matter of agnosticism. If Shirley could not find "a few agnostics will not forget that nothingness, nothing, and love-making sometimes are more dependable principles than any to respect to the mythologies," and then proceed to defend them accordingly. It would be a most unfair case for the Marquis, as he is a person of proportion long weight, as will be observed in the following extract from his letter in reply, in which he bestows the honorary of the ring to express his view of the situation: "And I thought that I should have been allowed to have a real entry on your account S. with Mr. Cecil, believing you, I should not doubt be only too delighted to get the chance, and would even settle him in public (only, alas, although the spirit is willing the flesh is weak. I have to acknowledge with regret that I have not sufficient confidence in myself as a debater to stand up to one who I know is a finished fighter." So long between us he has to acknowledge himself with his pen to reply, "I have no fear of his ear of all the world." This is plucky, but after all it shows that the Marquis prefers fighting with soft gloves to using the bare knuckles.

The Marquis, however, makes a very brisk fight. In his first letter he shows that by nationality he is a Scot distinctly believes in ghosts and fairies, and shows that he does not deny the existence of a divine power or ruler of the universe. He only affirms that such a being is inscrutable. He also denies the authority of the Scotsman to declare that being or entity, and says that it is just as logical to call it "fact" or "it" as "Him." If there never was a legislator, they the Marquis states that a great Five Comes is distributable. It cannot be denied that the Marquis has built a best house, and that the Marquis makes it between the two over the shoulders of Hector, the author of agnosticism. If Hector could not find "a few agnostics will not forget that nothingness, nothing, and love-making sometimes are more dependable principles than any to respect to the mythologies," and then proceed to defend them accordingly. THE DEW DAY BURGLARS.

All the bankers of a number of real-estate dealers and brokers of this city organized as a Real-Estate Board, and unanimity under the direction of Mr. E. A. Cummings, the Legislature at the last session authorized the appointment of a commission of twelve persons by the Governor to devise a new revenue system for the State. The name Real-Estate Board is now ruling by influence to secure the appointment of Commissioners in sympathy with the Cummings idea, and as a result a county commissioner, the assessor of Mr. Whiting and Mr. Linegar, who respectively represented the interests through the Senate and the House. From now on all the investigations shall be made by the Executive will be subjected to a pressure to collect more favorable to the interests of double taxation, which is the real aim of the movement, disguise it as its promoters may.

Amid the discussions of the proposed revision of the Revenue law it is hinted that a large amount of personal property escapes taxation, and that consequently real estate bears more than its proper proportion of the public burdens, and the alleged object of the new system is to relieve the former of real estate. To do this it is proposed to abandon the prevailing system of valuation, which assesses property at about one-third of its actual cash value, to order that household furniture, horses, cattle, vehicles, crops, stocks of goods, and manufacturing and business capital be assessed fairly as much as now, and also to institute some system of exchange which will bring out "hidden property"—purchases of cash, notes, bank accounts, mortgages—and how it is to attain to the taxation of the kind, its property now which the personal assessment is the chief source of revenue, is the subject of much discussion. It is understood that the advocates of the new system will insist on

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Anarchists and Communists Will No Longer Find an Asylum in Switzerland.

Probability that the British Government Will Deign to Investigate the Bauerstrauss Affair.

A Measure in Behalf of the Loubet Party—A Conspiracy to Resist Taxation in the Soudan.

LONDON, July 31.—[By Atlantic Cable to The Tribune.]—The Swiss Federal Government recently became convinced that Switzerland was being made the headquarters of organized associations of Anarchists and Communists, who, under the pretense of seeking refuge from tyranny at home, had abused the freedom of the Republic and made it a dark centre which to hatch murderous plots against other countries. The attention of the Swiss Government was particularly directed to this subject by the international spats upon the visit of Student Von Rinday at Frauenfeld—Rinday, by the by, is another of Bulow-Cumerow's friends. It was shortly made clear that the plots which resulted in that arrest were arranged at Berne, and that the money furnished to Rinday, who had a good Frauenfeld shoemaker, came from the Swiss capital. These facts were communicated by the German police to the Swiss authorities, and stricter surveillance was established over suspected persons. The Federal Government has now taken the following measures: It has declared its intention to refuse passports to Anarchists and Communists, and to expel from the country all who, in spite of this refusal, shall enter it. It has also declared its intention to withdraw the right of asylum from all who shall be found guilty of political crimes. It has also declared its intention to withdraw the right of asylum from all who shall be found guilty of political crimes. AN EXTENSIVE BLAZE.

The Brighton Park Cotton Mills Totally Destroyed at a Loss of $150,000.

A Spark from a Passing Locomotive Supposed to Have Caused the Fire.

A Obstacle Race Half Destroyed—Three Watchmen Besieged Several Hot—Other Losses.

The buildings of the Brighton Park Cotton Manufacturing Company, situated about half a mile east of Brighton, on the Chicago & Alton railroad, were nearly destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The mills have been shut down for about a week, and the only persons near the buildings was the two watchmen, Thomas McDonald, who discovered fire in the picker and mixing room about 2:15 o'clock. He sent messengers to Brighton Park, who called a good policeman to turn in an alarm. The policemen refused to do so for some time, and not until the two had gained with bribery so to make the work of the Fire Department of little avail when it arrived. The fire spread rapidly under the impetus given to the strong northwest wind at the time, being separated from southeast part within half the hour. Three buildings were built last week, and capable of holding 2,000 bales of cotton. On this there happened not more than 1,000 bales, and the entire loss will not exceed $150,000. The mills were owned by Thomas McDonald, and were fitted with the most modern machinery. The insurance will amount to about $100,000, divided among a number of companies, but the exact amount could not be learned last night. The mills were to have been started up on Monday next, and about 500 hands would have been employed. The origin of the fire is said to have been a spark from the engine of a freight train which had just passed. Nearly all the employes of the mills are Germans, and reside in Brighton Park. There were in the mills 110 sewing machines, 30 carding machines, 10 combing machines, 10 speeders, and the entire engine and mixing room, and about 2,000 bales of cotton. The fire spread rapidly under the impetus given to the strong northwest wind at the time, being separated from southeast part within half the hour. Three buildings were built last week, and capable of holding 2,000 bales of cotton. On this there happened not more than 1,000 bales, and the entire loss will not exceed $150,000. The mills were owned by Thomas McDonald, and were fitted with the most modern machinery. The insurance will amount to about $100,000, divided among a number of companies, but the exact amount could not be learned last night. The mills were to have been started up on Monday next, and about 500 hands would have been employed. The origin of the fire is said to have been a spark from the engine of a freight train which had just passed. Nearly all the employes of the mills are Germans, and reside in Brighton Park. There were in the mills 110 sewing machines, 30 carding machines, 10 combing machines, 10 speeders, and the entire engine and mixing room, and about 2,000 bales of cotton
